1. Purpose and Acceptance

These Terms and Conditions govern the general use of NovaCart services, the purchase of products, and interactions between NovaCart and its customers.

By creating an account, browsing the platform, placing an order, or using NovaCart services, the customer agrees to follow the applicable terms. Product-specific terms, policies, and legally required notices may apply in addition to these general terms.

2. Eligibility

Customers must provide accurate information and use the service for lawful purposes. Where an account is required, the customer is responsible for maintaining the accuracy of account information.

NovaCart may restrict or suspend access when required to protect customers, the platform, or the integrity of transactions.

3. Account Responsibilities

Customers are responsible for:

- Providing accurate account and delivery information.
- Keeping account credentials confidential.
- Reviewing order details before confirmation.
- Reporting suspicious or unauthorized account activity.
- Using the platform only for lawful purposes.

Customers should never share passwords, OTPs, PINs, or confidential authentication information with support agents or the AI assistant.

4. Product Information

NovaCart aims to provide accurate product descriptions, images, specifications, availability, and pricing. However, information may occasionally require correction or updating.

The latest product listing and applicable order information should be treated as the primary source for a customer's purchase. If important information conflicts across sources, the issue should be reviewed rather than resolved by assumption.

5. Pricing and Taxes

The price presented during checkout is the applicable order price, subject to clearly displayed taxes, shipping charges, discounts, and other conditions.

NovaCart may correct pricing or listing errors where appropriate. If a material pricing error affects an order, the customer may be contacted before fulfillment continues.

6. Orders and Order Acceptance

Submitting an order constitutes a request to purchase the selected products. An order becomes confirmed when NovaCart's systems successfully accept and record the order.

NovaCart may decline or cancel an order in limited circumstances such as inventory unavailability, payment failure, suspected fraudulent activity, operational restrictions, or material listing errors.

7. Payment Terms

Customers must use an available and authorized payment method. Payment information is processed through supported payment providers and applicable security controls.

A successful payment attempt does not by itself guarantee that an order has been confirmed. If money is deducted but an order is not confirmed, the payment/order reconciliation process should be followed.

8. Shipping and Delivery

Delivery estimates are provided according to available fulfillment and logistics information. Actual delivery may vary because of operational, transportation, weather, location, or other unforeseen conditions.

The Shipping & Delivery Policy provides detailed rules for tracking, delays, failed delivery, damaged shipments, and missing packages.

9. Cancellation

Customers may request cancellation while the order remains in an eligible cancellable stage. Once an order reaches a non-cancellable fulfillment or shipment stage, standard cancellation may no longer be available.

The NovaCart Cancellation Policy provides the detailed cancellation rules.

10. Returns and Refunds

Eligible returns and refunds are subject to the applicable product conditions and policies.

The Return Policy defines return eligibility and process. The Refund Policy defines refund handling and status. A return or cancellation does not automatically mean that a refund has already been completed.

11. Prohibited Use

Customers must not use NovaCart services to:

- Commit fraud or abuse.
- Attempt unauthorized access.
- Interfere with platform operations.
- Submit intentionally false claims.
- Abuse promotional programs.
- Use another person's account without authorization.

- Engage in unlawful activities.

NovaCart may investigate and restrict activity that violates these requirements.

12. Reviews and Customer Content

Where NovaCart permits reviews, feedback, or other customer-submitted content, customers should provide honest and relevant information.

Content must not contain unlawful material, threats, confidential information belonging to another person, or intentionally misleading claims. NovaCart may moderate content according to applicable platform rules.

13. Promotions and Offers

Promotional offers may have separate eligibility requirements, validity periods, product restrictions, usage limits, or payment-method conditions.

Customers should review the specific offer terms. A promotion should not be treated as universally applicable to every product or customer.

14. Privacy and Personal Information

NovaCart should collect and process customer information only for legitimate service, order, support, security, and operational purposes in accordance with the applicable privacy notice.

Customers should avoid sharing unnecessary sensitive information with support. The AI assistant must not request passwords, OTPs, PINs, or confidential payment credentials.

15. Service Availability

NovaCart aims to maintain reliable service but cannot guarantee uninterrupted availability. Temporary outages, maintenance, technical failures, third-party service interruptions, or other operational events may affect platform availability.

Customers should retry later or contact support when a service issue prevents completion of an important transaction.

16. Limitation of Automated Support

The Autonomous Customer Support Copilot is intended to provide assistance based on approved NovaCart knowledge and available system information.

The AI assistant should not invent policy exceptions, guarantees, refund confirmations, delivery commitments, or account decisions. When information is insufficient or an issue requires internal investigation, the assistant should escalate the case.

17. Customer Support and Escalation

General informational questions can normally be answered without creating a ticket.

A ticket or human escalation may be appropriate for payment reconciliation, disputed refunds, complex returns, missing shipments, account-security concerns, contradictory order records, or other cases requiring internal verification.

The Customer Support & Escalation Policy defines the detailed escalation rules.

18. Changes to These Terms

NovaCart may update these Terms and Conditions when business, operational, legal, or service requirements change.

The latest published version should be used when answering customer questions. Historical orders may remain subject to terms applicable at the time of the transaction where required.

19. Governing and Legal Requirements

These fictional project terms are intended as a demonstration knowledge-base document and are not legal advice.

Actual legal terms for a real company would need to be reviewed and approved by qualified legal professionals and adapted to applicable laws and jurisdictions.

20. Examples

Example 1 — Customer asks: “Do I have to agree to terms before ordering?”

Expected handling: Explain that placing an order requires acceptance of the applicable terms and policies.

Example 2 — Customer asks: “Can support ask me for my OTP?”

Expected handling: No. The customer should never share OTPs, PINs, passwords, or confidential authentication information.

Example 3 — Customer asks: “The product price changed after I ordered. Which price applies?”

Expected handling: Explain that the confirmed order price is generally the relevant order price, subject to applicable terms and any documented pricing error.

Example 4 — Customer asks: “Can AI guarantee my refund today?”

Expected handling: No. The assistant should only provide a confirmed refund status when supported by system information and should avoid unsupported guarantees.

21. Policy Authority

This document is the authoritative general Terms & Conditions source for the NovaCart customer-support knowledge base.

When a customer's question concerns a specific operational process, the assistant should retrieve the relevant specialized policy as well. These terms should not be used to override more specific approved policies without a valid reason.

This document is fictional and created exclusively for the Autonomous Customer Support Copilot project.
